In an era of fake news and alternative facts, it is more important than ever to defend the integrity of history. In his new book, In Defence of History, Richard Evans argues that history is not a luxury, but a necessity for understanding the present and shaping the future.

Evans is a highly respected historian who has written extensively on the history of Europe and the Holocaust. In In Defence of History, he draws on his own experiences as a historian to provide a compelling and timely defence of the discipline.

Evans begins by arguing that history is essential for understanding the present. He points out that we cannot make sense of the world around us without understanding how it came to be. History provides us with the context we need to make informed decisions about the future.

Evans also argues that history is essential for shaping the future. He points out that we cannot learn from the mistakes of the past without understanding them. History can help us to avoid repeating the mistakes of the past and to create a better future.

Evans's book is a powerful and persuasive defence of history. He makes a compelling case for the importance of history in the modern world. In Defence of History is a must-read for anyone who cares about the future of our planet.
